

CHOICE?

Who wouldn't choose a moment of heaven, even if that moment was never meant to be forever.

To die in the magic of communion; the exclusion of boundaries between the I and the Thou, that truly would be a noble death.

Who wouldn't choose a moment of deep union, even if that merging could only occur in time-out-of-time... in the space between the worlds.

To lie in your arms and feel your breath – breathe me back to the living being I long ago forgot to remember... that alone is worth the price of admission.

Who wouldn't choose a moment of heaven, even of that moment was surrounded by chaos and dark shadows.

To experience wholeness in our soul's uniting... I believe in that, even the Gods recognize Divinity and speak of God.
